

EURO 2016 FANTASY FOOTBALL COMPETITION

We've had a bit of a hiatus with our last Fantasy Football competition covering the 2011-2012 Premier League season, but just in case you've missed us – we're back!! We're well into the pre-tournament friendlies, and all 24 competing nations' squads have now been finalised. So we've got a little bit of a gap before the tournament starts in France to get a Fantasy Football Competition up and running.

The competition isn't too complicated – pick 11 players from the 24 nations competing in the European Championships to form your team, and those 11 players will rack up points for you as the tournament progresses. After the group stages there's a chance to make a couple of transfers to ditch any players that didn't make it to the knockout stages, then it's double points all the way to the final on July 10th. Whoever manages the team which amasses the most points, and a few of those just behind them, will walk away with some prize money and a smug look on their face!!

As always, the league is open to one and all – feel free to pass copies of this form on to family, friends and even people you know, but don't particularly like – the more the merrier!! You are also welcome to enter more than one team if you wish. If anyone wants hard copies sending to either you or someone else interested in entering, just let me know. All the details and entry forms are available at www.oldfielddesign.com/FF

Enjoy picking your team(s). Good Luck!!
